Brazil has the largest population in Latin America, with an estimated 214 million inhabitants. The majority live in the south-central area, which includes the industrial cities of San Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, and Belo Horizonte. Urban growth has been rapid: by 1991, 75% of the total population were living in urban areas. Rapid growth has aided economic development but has also created serious social, environmental, and political problems for major cities. Despite these issues, Brazil is world renowned for its stunning natural beauty.

Four major groups make up the Brazilian population: the Portuguese, who colonised Brazil in the 16th century; Africans brought to Brazil as slaves; various other European, Middle Eastern, and Asian immigrant groups who have settled in Brazil since the mid-19th century. Although the major European ethnic group of Brazil was once Portuguese, subsequent waves of immigration have contributed to a diverse ethnic and cultural heritage.

From 1875 until 1960, about 5 million Europeans emigrated to Brazil, settling mainly in the four southern states of San Paulo, Parana, Santa Catarina, and Rio Grande do Sul. Immigrants have come mainly from Italy, Germany, Spain, Japan, Poland, and the Middle East. The largest Japanese community outside Japan is in Sao Paulo. Brazil is the only Portuguese - speaking nation in the Americas. Portuguese Conquistador, Pedro Cabral, led his fleet of ships to the shores of the country now called Brazil in April 1500.
